Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Sir:

The Office of Defense Mobilization has requested the Army Signal Corps to establish a leased microwave system to provide facilities for the Presidential Red-Line and the Interagency Communication System. This microwave system, to be in service on October 1, 1957, is presently being constructed and will connect the Central Intelligence Agency and other critical Agency Relocation Sites with High Point.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company under Army Signal Corps supervision, will provide a permanent, self supporting steel microwave tower and a concrete block, single story, equipment building on a plot of real estate adjacent to the Central Intelligence Agency, [REDACTED]

A buried cable will be provided between the American Telephone and Telegraph microwave building [REDACTED] In addition, a pole line supporting an overhead cable will be constructed by the most direct overland route [REDACTED] This cable will support all requirements in the foreseeable future. The sections of this cable on government property will be government owned and government maintained. The balance will be leased.

This microwave and connecting cable facility will be made available at no cost to the Central Intelligence Agency and has been designed to provide expansion when required. Arrangements as outlined above have been agreed upon between representatives of the Office of Defense Mobilization, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Chief Signal Officer and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Sincerely,

signed

WALTER B. LAREW
